

CBIT – THE UK PERSPECTIVE

Laura Aylett

Senior Policy Advisor, International Climate and Energy

18th April 2017, Copenhagen

Why do we support CBIT?

The UK is giving £10m from the International Climate Fund and £1m from the Scottish Government's Climate Justice Fund because...

Transparency is a fundamental building block of the Paris Agreement:

- Tracks overall progress against high-level goals
- Shows progress against countries' NDCs
- Feeds into the global stocktake cycle

Domestically, reliable information and analytical capability is crucial for:

- Understanding where your emissions come from
- Creating evidence-based policies
- Supporting wider development goals

But transparency is complex

It requires:

- Technical knowledge
- Access to data and methodologies
- Institutional and governance structures

Currently developing countries have different capacities ...which is where CBIT comes in.

Hopes for CBIT

The UK would like to see:

- Proposals focused on countries' specific requirements
- Links made between transparency and NDC implementation
- Innovative ideas to share learning
- Close alignment with the MPGs of the transparency framework
- More donors coming forward, and the long-term future of CBIT work secured in GEF-7

THANK YOU

laura.aylett@beis.gov.uk

